

As an early adopter of XM Satellite Radio, I haven't been more pleased with the service. In a capital society that we live in, XM should have a fair opportunity to broadcast any decent material they please (I am not advocating porn or Howard Stern, I am talking about Traffic & Weather). I am an end-user who PAYS to listen to satellite instead of local stations. The FCC should let the market dictate the direction of the service and let XM Radio work out their cost model.

To try and kill competition to allow others less competition is not a capital society and the FCC should not have anything to do with it.

The thought of these companies trying to stifle the competition with government intervention makes me sick to my stomach!

What's next? Is the NAB going to try and prevent users from going to www.weather.com or www.georgia-navigator.com? Let them offer a service that keeps customers on their dial...not bully the competition out!

Sincerely,
Monte Jackson
Extremely Satisfied XM Radio Customer

p.s. I would rather listen to the programs on XM than local station giving traffic reports!
